

Islip, NY – Islip Town Councilman John Edwards recently honored a group of students from East Islip High School who are part of the Environmental Green Curriculum, a Career Academy program set up with the Long Island Works Coalition.

Students enrolled in the program had environmental concerns and issues incorporated into their classes.

The students were involved in arranging several events, including East Islip’s annual Earth Day Fair. They also learned about organic gardening and residential energy efficiency, in addition to their normal course work.

Pictured are the students and administrators with Town Councilman John Edwards (back row, second from right); Town Supervisor Phil Nolan (third from right); Councilwoman Trish Bergin (fourth from right); Councilman Steve Flotteron (back row, left); and Councilman Gene Parrington (fourth from left).